Local Outlook For Business Will Be Topic

Merrill Bateman, dean of the BYU graduate school of Management and College of Business, will address a general membership luncheon of the Provo Chamber of Commerce Wednesday at noon in the Crystal Room of the Continental Mini Mall, 250 W. Center St., Provo.

Miss Utah County Pageant Program Being Prepared

Eleven community queens of the area are entered in the Miss Utah County Pageant, with selection of the new queen scheduled for the opening night of the Bicentennial Utah County Fair.

The new Miss Utah County will be crowned Aug. 19 in the Spanish Fork High School auditorium. The pageant and associated variety show will be a featured part of the three-day Utah County Fair, the first local fair held since 1942.

Chairman of the pageant is Jean Meeker, Orem, assisted by Trudy Dickerson, Orem, and Gaylene Lowe, Springville, staging and directing; Frances Johnson, Provo, hostess chairman; and Shell Kizerian, Orem, judging. Geraldine Wood, Orem, is committee adviser.

Pre-contest workshops will be conducted by Clara Jameson, while Gloria Lowe will be in charge of choreography. Walt Stewart will serve as master of ceremonies of the contest.

The new queen will be crowned by Shauna Pedersen, American Fork, the reigning Miss Utah County, and the new attendants will be honored by the current attendants, Becky Knight, Springville, and Karen Hansen, Benjamin.

Contestants are: Becky Myers, Pleasant Grove; Robyn Atwood, Spanish Fork; Natalie Beck, American Fork; Mary Ann Miller, Provo; Lori Montague, Payson; Cindy

free-for-all question and answer session, and seemed to handle each question with candor. The only question that stumped him was, "Was it hard doing Johnny Whitaker?"

One section of the show follows the theme of school spirit, one of the highlights of the school. Dancers suddenly became spirited cheerleaders and Billy Whitaker made a hilarious "Fonzie."

To reiterate, most of the show was professional. During the magic tricks, sometimes the hand was not quite faster than the eye, but it was all in fun. The best performer was undoubtedly Johnny, but give the others a chance — they'll mature also.

Johnny Whitaker Show Entertaining for Family

It doesn't seem to matter if Johnny Whitaker entertains before a crowd of 25,000 or 50 — his performance is equally enthusiastic either time.

Though he presented The Johnny Whitaker Show at Orem High School to a sparse crowd on Friday, his performance was worthy of a packed-house crowd.

For above par family entertainment, don't miss the show this week, Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. in Orem High School's auditorium.

Also featured Friday were three other members of the Whitaker family — Billy, Mary and Dora. Billy was of the ham-it-up variety; Mary was pretty and sang quite well, and Dora looked like an affable female version of her well-known brother.

Dancing and singing by the back-up troupe was enthusiastic and well executed. It reminded this reviewer of the type of showmanship that comes out of Brigham Young University, which isn't surprising since most of the cast are former members of BYU's Program Bureau.

Most of the show was thoroughly professional. Johnny came across as the seasoned performer he is. His image, however, for so many years has been as an appealing, cute, red-headed moppet — an image that should be dropped now that his voice has deepened, and he's become tall, lean and adolescent. One number, "Baby Face," ended when Johnny emerged with bib, bonnet and bottle. It was supposed to be cute, but Johnny Whitaker is no longer "cute."

He was much more effective when he sang contemporary songs, i.e. "I Got Love," and "If We Only Had Love."

Johnny has the ability to communicate with the audience on a none-to-one level, which is effective. He went into the audience for a
